Art of the Red Year: Morrowind, 4E 4 to 4E 6

The Red Year

In 4E 5 the Ministry of Truth, the rock Baar Dau that Vivec held in the sky, fell on his city. Red Mountain woke beside it, ash buried Vvardenfell, and the Argonians came north across the border. This is the world your caravan crosses.

Red Mountain: Dagoth Ur's old seat, quiet for a generation, then not.

The rock fell, the mountain answered, and Vivec's cantons became Scathing Bay.

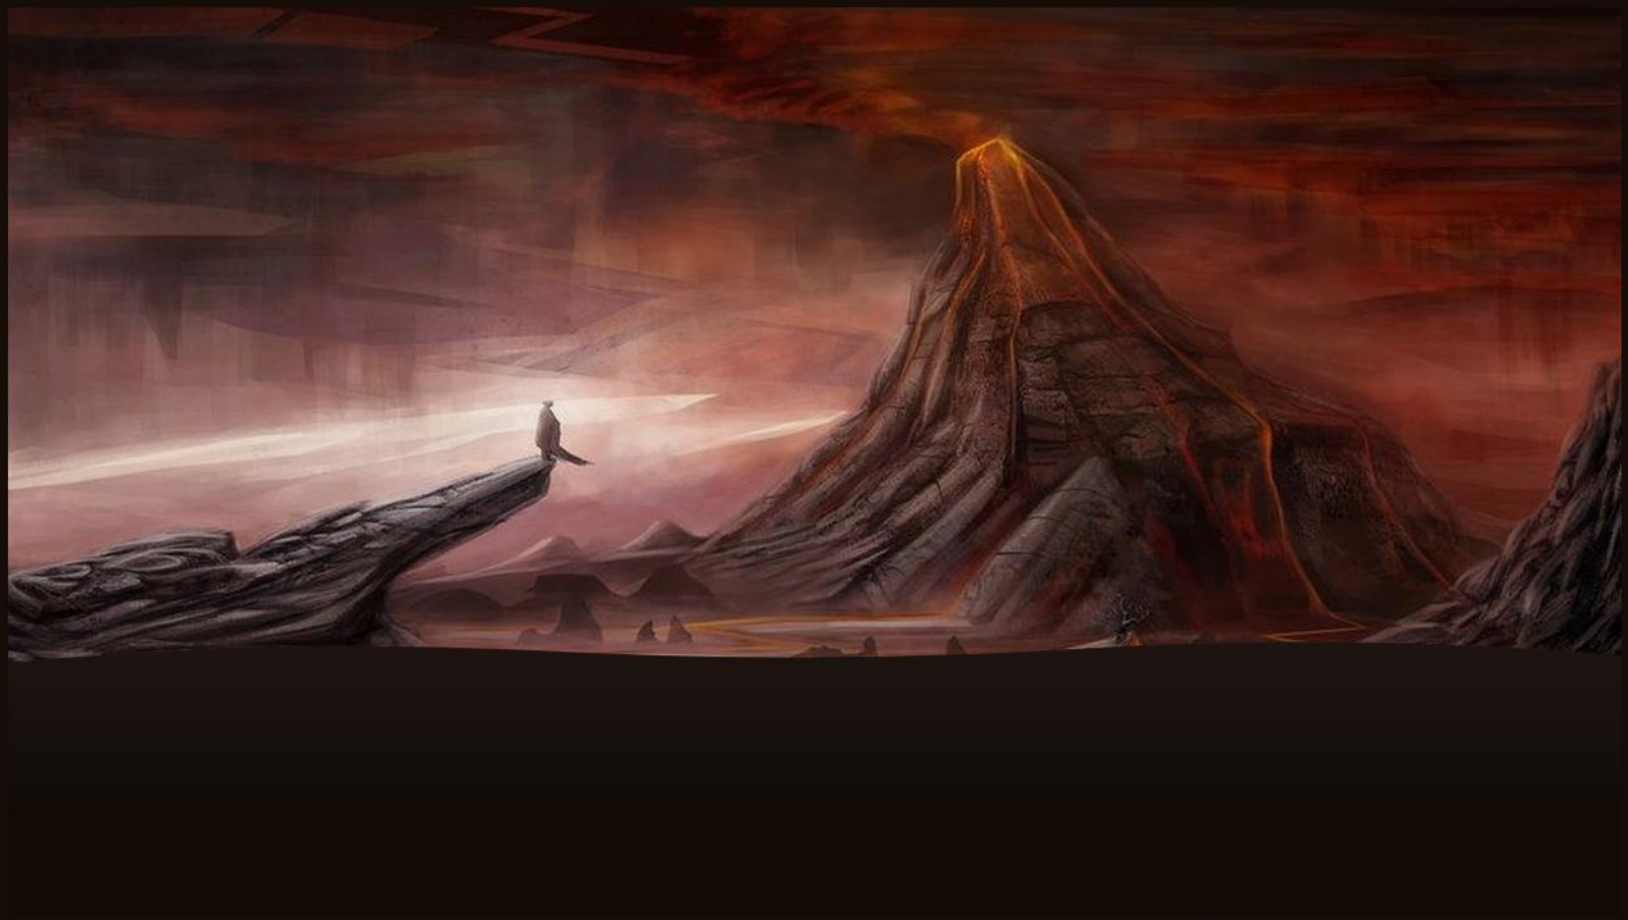

With Morrowind on its knees, Black Marsh repaid centuries of slave raids.

Redoran carried the province through: grain, shelter and swords for the ash-blind.

The Tower Duel

When customs seize your goods, you can contest it before a magistrate. The hearing is a duel of towers: each side summons Daedra, raises its tower and walls, and spends Stone, Troops and Magic to bring the other side's case down.

Red Mountain, the year the ground would not hold still.

Your Tower is your case, your Wall is its defence. Reach 100 first.

Stone cards

Stone builds your case: ebony from the cracked earth, Daedric brick, the masons of Sheogorath's Mazken, and the ruins of a god's city. Every card here raises a spire or a wall, or tears one down.

Ash Mortar

Baar Dau

Daedric Brick

Dagon's Gate

Dusk Spire

Ebony Vein

Ghostfence Stones

Mazken Masons

Shrine Stone

Spire of Ebonheart

Troops cards

Troops are the people and creatures you can hire, beg or summon: Ordinators in gold masks, the Morag Tong's lawful killers and their Dark Brotherhood rivals, Redoran spears, the Emperor's Legion and the Dwemer machines that outlived their makers.

Archer

Dark Brotherhood

Dwemer Centurion

Guar Rider

Legion Cohort

Lesser Summoning

Mephala's Web

Morag Tong
